Five Decades of Helping Others – A Lifetime of Caring

Why Support TSI?

For fifty years, Transitional Services has been providing housing and support services designed to meet the needs and preferences of individuals who have psychiatric or intellectual disabilities. In 1969, Transitional Services emerged as a one-of-its kind agency providing services to assist individuals with mental illnesses leaving state hospitals as they transition into the community.

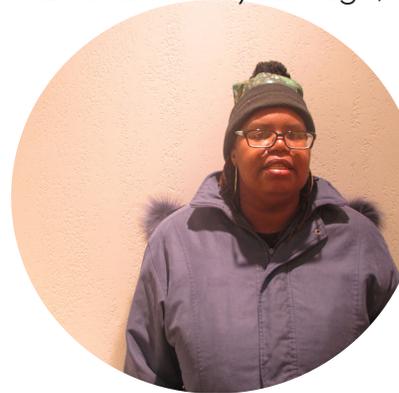

Today, they continue to provide residential and community rehabilitative services to over 500 individuals with both mental illness and intellectual disabilities yearly. Transitional Services operates ten residences and works in partnership with individuals in the community to help them gain skills, access resources, establish community connections, and support their recovery so that they may have a meaningful life in the community.

As a result of the services that Transitional Services provides and their collaboration with community resources, individuals find and sustain housing allowing them to have a safe environment and be integrated in their communities from which they can experience a higher quality of life.

Transitional Services Through Ayesha

Ayesha's life became better when she moved to Pittsburgh around seven years ago, after living in Chicago for 21 years.

Before that she was in and out of hospitals, trying to manage her bipolar disorder, after being diagnosed when she was 26. "The ages between 20 and 30, I was very sick, but since I came to Pittsburgh, my life became good."

She first began her journey with Transitional Services when she moved into one of their group homes in November 2016. There, she lived for 18 months, as staff helped her develop vital skills, such as managing her own medication, keeping her room clean, and cooking. Her favorite meal to cook was chicken, mashed potatoes, and corn. While at the group home, the staff encouraged her to take care of herself. "They get you prepared to get out, but you have to do your part. You need to work at it!"

After leaving the group home, Transitional Services helped her move into her own apartment, where she enjoys the comfort and privacy of having her own space. She says that the TSI staff has been a big support to her in her new apartment and have helped her prepare for things like cooking, cleaning, managing her own medicine, paying rent, and paying bills.

Ayesha has been volunteering at Magee Women's Hospital for the past seven years and is proud to have won the Joyce King Award, which is a special honor that recognizes individuals who made significant contributions to promote advocacy and recovery for individuals with a mental health diagnosis or disorders related to the use of alcohol and other substances.
